Who Needs a Badge Holder?

Don't we all know someone who wears a badge?

With today's technology and extra security, there is an increased need for staffing to display their identity as a trusted employee. Some securities are even providing their staff with key cards, like we use in hotel rooms. My family utilizes badge holders at theme parks.

Whenever you buy a park pass, you'll need to whip it out for food discounts throughout the day. And what about teachers, medical professionals, government contractors, military staff - I could go on and on! So, why not create badge holders in an array of color combinations. I've just added a few creations on my "Everything Else" page. These pieces aren't like other lampwork jewelry in that the attention grabber will be your center focal! You can really keep the costs down by adding seed beads, bugles and glass instead of the more expensive crystals and gemstones.

Think "Badge Holder" next time you're buying a gift for that someone who has everything! They're not just for work anymore!

That's a good question! This past weekend, a dear friend came to me for a "special gift". Wouldn't your first thought be "what does she like to wear?" Me too! I was suprised when she said "No, I want beads!" It's not uncommon to wonder what is the right set for your next project. Are you making necklace, bracelet, earrings or all the above? Well, one of the favorite sellers on my Sets page is the Large sets with an eye-catching focal and several smaller graduating beads that match the color-scheme and design. With this type of set you can make a single Focal necklace as well as earrings and you'll still have enough for the bracelet! Or you can utilize the entire large set as an Elegant Necklace with the focal being in front and all the graduating beads spaced among gemstones and sterling silver. Remember the earrings . . .

And another type of bead set is the Spacer Sets. In these sets, all the beads are almost the exact size and make perfect bracelet sets! Your accents can have unlimited possibilities. These sets are also great for extras like toggle weights, key chains and phone tags. I even had a request last month to make bling charms for Cat and Dog collars with these smaller beads! What a neat idea! Put a small bead on a head pin with a crystal and end with a lobster claw. You now have an exchangeable bling for your tiny loved one! Spacer sets are also great for earring pairs, you can make matching sets for sisters or mother and daughters!
